WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Scattered high clouds will stream over the region today, but the trend is for decreasing clouds with warmer and drier conditions through the weekend as high pressure strengthens overhead. This pattern will also produce NW-NE surface winds. Peak gusts will be early Friday, with gusts in wind-prone areas in and around the Sacramento Valley reaching 25-35 mph. Temperatures will increase from near normal today to 7-10 degrees above normal by Sunday. At this time next week looks mild to warm and mostly dry, but with occasional mountain showers or thunderstorms during the middle and end of the week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Locally strong north winds developed overnight across the I-5 Corridor southward to the Santa Monica Mountains as well as the Santa Ynez Range in Santa Barbara County. Expect winds of 20-30 mph with some gusts to over 50 mph in these areas this morning before winds gradually subside this afternoon. North and northwest winds of 15-25 mph with gusts to 35 mph will develop during the afternoon and evening across the Central Coast and Kern County Mountains. Temperatures today will be 2-5 degrees warmer with highs close to 90 in the valleys to the 60s in the mountains above 6,000 feet. Minimum RH will be much lower today with readings dropping into the 15-20 percent range over many areas below 3,000 feet. Late tonight into Saturday, the flow will transition to the northeast which will cause winds to increase across northern Los Angeles County and Ventura County as well as areas of the Inland Empire and northern Orange County. Expect offshore winds of 15-30 mph with occasional higher gusts Saturday morning before winds taper off in the afternoon. The Colorado River Valley will also see strong north winds of 20-30 mph with gusts to 50 mph the next couple of days. Weak onshore flow may allow for some cooling near the coast Sunday, but it will remain very warm inland throughout the weekend. Expect high temperatures to climb into the lower 90s Saturday through the middle of next week across the valleys of Southern California, but some marine layer coverage may return to the coasts. RH will drop to around 15% in the valleys and lower foothills each day. Recovery will be poor over inland areas of Southern California tonight and Saturday night, but better recovery may occur early next week. Temperatures may trend downward toward next weekend. No rain is expected through the period.
